Profiles in Elder, Female Homicides

Until his recent retirement from the Federal Bureau of Investigations, when the phone rang in the FBI’s Behavioral Analysis Unit, it was a safe bet that the caller on the other end had a grim story to tell. Investigators from all over the world dialed up the small, highly trained cadre of agents in Quantico, VA – known informally as profilers - for help and advice when leads in their criminal cases turned cold or frayed into infinite and troubling possibilities. SA Saferik’s expertise is in the area of offenders who target senior, female victims. He spent 10 years researching cases of elderly women who were raped and murdered. Through his empirical study of 128 cases in 30 states over a 24-year period and at least 100 other homicides, a picture emerged of potential offenders. This presentation will disclose those findings as well as provide an insight into the average age of the offender and their victims.

Speaker: Mark Saferik, Special Agent (ret), Federal Bureau of Investigation
